

You're my puppy

May 29, 2011 By Meg 15 Comments

According to this story floating around the Internet, this little ginger foster kitten named Cheech was introduced to a teeny tiny five-day old orphaned chihuahua puppy named Casanova.

Cheech took to the little puppy immediately grooming and cleaning him.

The puppy responded to his every touch, snuggling up to his new friend like a pup to his mother.

When Cheech was tired, he would climb into the puppy's box and cuddle with Casanova, sharing his heating blanket.

To Cheech, he was “his” puppy and best friend.

Why can't all Human adults and Human children be like this? Is it that animals are born with a purer Spirit and Humans are not? Children as young as two years of age have been known to harm other children and small animals, and a couple of 4-year-old boys were caught stealing from a neighbor's home and one of the males picking up and kicking the neighbor's new-born son in the head, opening up his skull and causing permanent brain damage. Do “animals” do this?